Project Description: This Rural Development investment will be used to make essential repairs to the city of Carlin's wastewater treatment operation. The system is experiencing multiple age-related failures including aged collection mains, leakage from pipes and treatment ponds, and aging lift station equipment. This investment will replace over five miles of main transmission sewer line including the replace of 50 manhole covers and is considered the most critical need of the aging sewer system. Carlin's wastewater system, particularly the main transmission lines, has reached or exceeded its useful life and is in poor condition. These improvements are necessary to maintain a functioning sewer system and is the second of eight phases to bring the system up to modernization.
